

News Release

(March 28, 2011) Mayor Jo Ann Graves has been named by Nashville Post Magazine as one of the region's "leaders shaping and reshaping" the Middle Tennessee community.

The March/April edition of the magazine is devoted to "...Middle Tennessee's business and political power brokers – the leaders who have already shaped and are in many ways reshaping (the region)." The magazine lists these leaders in several categories including the arts, banking and finance, education, government/politics, health care and more.

Nashville Post says Mayor Graves is "... among the region's most vocal regionalism advocates." It lists among her credentials that she is Chair of the Middle Tennessee Mayors Caucus which is examining mass transit for the region.

"I am honored to be recognized by Nashville Post Magazine," Mayor Graves said. "My work on the Mayors Caucus as well as Chair of the Regional Transportation Authority gives Gallatin a lead in pursuing mass transit for the area. When surveyed, the citizens of Gallatin said expanding mass transit in the city is one of their top priorities."

To read more about Nashville Post Magazine, visit www.nashvillepost.com

###